PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE
UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

George Mihalopoulos, a seaman, acting in propria persona prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit entered in the above entitled case on May 16, 1974.

CITATION TO OPINIONS BELOW

The judgment on jury verdict from the U.S. Dist. Court for the North. Dist. of Calif., Civil Action File No. 71-231 LHB, that was rendered is unreported and is printed in Appendix A hereto, infra, p. 17. The memorandum opinion of the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit that was rendered is unreported and is printed in Appendix A hereto, infra, p. 18.

JURISDICTION

Jurisdiction is founded on the United States Constitution, Article III, Sec. 2, 28 U.S.C. § 1333(1); 46 U.S.C. § 688; 28 U.S.C. § 1252; and 28 U.S.C. § 1916. This is an admiralty or seaman's suit.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether any parties involved in a civil suit in a district court are deprived of their Constitutional rights as applicable to Amends. I, V, VII and XIV at a public trial, when the litigating parties and the public are not permitted and are denied the opportunity to personally observe all the jurors gathered simultaneously in the jury box and in open court after the jury's return from a lengthy overnight recess and prior to any further continuation of the jurors' deliberations.

2. Whether any parties involved in a civil suit in a district court are deprived of their Constitutional rights as applicable to Amends. I, V, VII, and XIV at a public trial when the impanelled jury of six, after a lengthy overnight recess, is not permitted to be assembled by the district court in a complete body, so that the district court can give to the jurors a brief format or general outline dealing with the district court's "Instructions to the Jury" of the previous day, in order to sufficiently refresh the jurors' recollection or recall, thus enabling and assisting the jurors in their further deliberations in rendering a fair and just verdict.

3. Whether any parties in an appeal to the circuit court of appeals are deprived of their Constitutional rights of due process as applicable to Amends. V and XIV and Amend. I are hindered in their appeal when the district court has failed to properly maintain records of the trial proceedings and when all parties concerned have failed to account for a deficiency in the transcript involved which, as in the case at hand, shows a lapse or void of 74 minutes when demonstrated by the optimal rate of speaking of 125 to 150 words per minute.

STATEMENT

With all proper and due respect to all parties concerned, I would like to state that I am a seaman who is now acting in propria persona.

On February 4, 1971, my attorney at that time, Mr. John Victor Tilly of Jennings, Gartland and Tilly, 352 World Trade Center, S. F., Calif. 94111, filed a Complaint for Damages on my behalf for personal injury under the Jones Act and General Maritime Law in the U. S. District Court, Northern Dist. of Calif. The defendant in the case (No. C-71-231-LHB) was Ideal Cement Company, a corporation.

The disputed factual issues were tried before an impanelled jury of six members and two alternates. The trial began Jan. 15, 1973 and ended Jan. 23, 1973. The disposition of the district court was an adverse judgment rendered against myself, the plaintiff.

On Feb. 21, 1973, a notice was filed by me with the district court discharging my attorney and on that same date I filed, in propria persona, a Notice of Appeal to the 9th Cir. Ct. of Appeals. This case was numbered 73-1797.

My brief was filed with the appeals court on Sept. 15, 1974, in which I raised nine questions relating to my Constitutional rights.

On May 16, 1974 an order was issued by the appeals court affirming the lower court's judgment.

It is my assertion that, during the course of the various court proceedings, several arbitrarily oppressive and unjust events occurred in the district court which are contrary and repugnant to the U. S. Constitution.

One of those events took place during the jury's deliberations on Jan. 22 and 23, 1973 and is reflected on p. 69 (transcript) in which the court "will recess this trial of the action for the deliberation in this case until 11:00 o'clock tomorrow"; followed by a brief admonition; then by the clerk's statement that "Court is recessed until 11:00 o'clock a.m."

On the following day, after the overnight recess, the district court never reconvened. Neither the trial transcript nor the court record reflects that it had done so, because, in actual fact, it never did. Furthermore, although my attorney and I were in the court room together long before 11:00 a.m., we were not witness to any such event as a complete or partial gathering of any or all of the impanelled jurors before and in open court, nor were we witness to any court proceedings directly involving any partial or simultaneous polling of attendance whatsoever of any or all of the trial jurors in attendance prior to and before any further continuation of that jury's further deliberation of a verdict; whereby neither my attorney nor myself nor the public were afforded any opportunity whatsoever to personally observe all the jurors simultaneously in the jury box and in open court so that the jurors could then go in a full and complete body into the action for further deliberation in this case in the rendering of a fair and just verdict.

In this instance, the district court was in error when it elected not to reconvene as it had been instructed.

Additionally, when the district court failed to reconvene at that particular time, it set into motion obvious circumstances that jeopardized the rendering of a fair and just verdict; simply because there is no earthly assurance that a imately 19 hours; at home and with other matters to occupy their minds; would retain sufficient recollection or recall without the district court reconvening with the complete jury in attendence in order to give the jurors a brief format or general outline dealing with the district court's "Instructions to the Jury" of the previous day in order to sufficiently refresh the jurors recollection or recall; thus enabling and assisting the jurors in their further deliberations in rendering a fair and just verdict, instead of leaving it to chance.

My Constitutional rights as applicable to Amends. I, V, VII and XIV were therefore denied me in the above described events.

Acting as my own attorney, I have repeatedly made various efforts to account for the deficiencies in the trial transcript of this case No. 71-231-LHB, by correspondence and phone calls to the parties directly involved. Partial records pertaining to this are in the files or records for June 19, July 5, Aug. 10 and Aug. 20, 1973 and referred to in a motion to the appeals court on Aug. 7, 1973.

For the purpose of clarity, I have elected to construct the facts in this positive manner:

Page 80 (record, Jan. 22, 1973) shows that: the argument of Mr. Tilly, my attorney, took 1 hour, 5 minutes (10:25 AM to 11:30 AM); the argument of the attorney for Ideal Cement Co. took 1 hour (12:00 N. to 1:00 PM); Mr. Tilly's rebuttal took 25 minutes (1:00 PM to 1:25 PM).

In the partial trial transcript of Jan. 22, 1973, the argument of Mr. Tilly is shown, as recorded by the court reporter. (pp. 27 thru 41) The number of words shown as spoken by Mr. Tilly in 1 hr. 5 mins. total 3,637; an average rate of 56 words per minute.

In the partial trial transcript of Jan. 22, 1973, the argument of the attorney for Ideal Cement Co. is shown, as recorded by the court reporter.(pp. 41 thru 63) The number of words shown as spoken by the defendant's attorney in 1 hour total 5,812; an average rate of 97 words per minute.

In the partial trial transcript of Jan. 22, 1973, the rebuttal of Mr. Tilly is shown, as recorded by the court reporter. (pp. 63 thru 67) The number of words shown as spoken by Mr. Tilly in 25 mins. total 822; an average rate of 33 words per minute.

Again for clarity and succinctness, I shall refer to the above in the following manner:

	No. of Words	Time	Words per Min.
Mr. Tilly's Argument	3,637	65 min.	56
Ideal Cement Argument	5,812	60 min.	97
Mr. Tilly's Rebuttal	822	25 min.	33

There is a very wide discrepancy here and it is inconceivable that any attorney addressing a jury in a presentation of his summation in the argument of any case would speak so slowly that the jury would have difficulty in following him and in keeping their attention upon what he was saying.

On page 1271 of the "Encyclopedia of Educational Research", under the headings of Speech, Voice and Speech research, it states: "Optimal rate of speaking is 125 to 150 words per minute. Rate varies about any normative figure."

At the modest and conventional rate of 135 words per minute, it would mean that Mr. Tilly would have completed his argument (as shown in the transcript) in 27 minutes leaving a void of 38 minutes. It would mean that Ideal Cement Co.'s attorney would have completed his argument (as shown in the transcript in 43 minutes leaving a void of 17 minutes. And it would mean that Mr. Tilly would have completed his rebuttal in 6 minutes leaving a void of 19 minutes. And, if there was any "paper shuffling" involved, it wasn't that much.

The court record reflects that a total of two hours and thirty minutes were taken up with arguments and rebuttal and yet, as shown above, there is a total void of seventy four minutes, a fact which everyone directly involved has failed to recognize.

As I have demonstrated, there is a 38 minute lapse or void throughout the argument that my attorney presented to the jury on my behalf which is not reflected in the transcript.

Of equal, if not more, importance is the 19 minute lapse or void of words used by my attorney in his rebuttal to Ideal Cement Co.'s argument which are also not reflected in the transcript.

One of the issues that I raised and pursued in my opening brief and reply brief in the appeals court pertained to improper and prejudicial remarks of Ideal Cement Co.'s attorney, certain of which are also not reflected in the transcript and which I was therefore unable to pursue.

For the above reasons, my appeal was hindered since the missing portions were not available for my use.

I have no cases to cite other than my Constitutional rights to due process of Amends. V and XIV and of Amend. I.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

With all proper and due respect to the court, I assert that procedures of the district court and the events I have related that occurred during the trial of George Mihalopoulos vs. Ideal Cement Company are in severe conflict with the United States Constitution.

In the first and second questions that I have presented to the court are events that are intertwined and for that reason I shall combine them and refer to them as one.

The court record, page 80, reflects that instructions were given by the district court to the jury on January 22, 1973.

It well may be that 12 jurors may have retained some reliable degree of recall and recollection by virtue of their numbers, but the degree of recollection of 6 jurors, as in this case, is not substantial; nevertheless, this does not erase nor diminish the fact that 19 hours is a long recess without the jury being reconvened to be given a brief format or general outline dealing with the district court's "Instructions to the Jury" of the previous day to refresh the jurors' recall or recollection in order to assist them in rendering a fair and just verdict; and again, 19 hours is a long recess without the jury being reassembled and reintroduced into the atmosphere of the court and introduced to the business they have taken an oath to conduct in, again, the rendering of a fair and just verdict. This is not in keeping with the due process Amends. of V and XIV.

Furthermore, when the court elected not to reconvene, as it had directed on the previous day, it imposed a censorship that abridged the freedom of speech and assembly of all parties concerned which is contrary to Amend. I.

Additionally, Amend. VI in part states: "and public trial, by an impartial jury". In the same vein, Amend. VII in part states: "The right of trial by jury shall be preserved."

When any of those aspects of a jury trial which should be made public are not made public, the right of a trial by jury and the right of a trial by an impartial jury are no longer preserved; and this in turn infringes upon Amends. V and XIV of due process of law.

I had cited numerous authorities involving freedom of speech in my brief to the appeals court, but at this point I am standing on the basic rights that are afforded and guaranteed by the Constitution.

10,000 words, more or less, can be spoken in 74 minutes at the optimal rate of 135 words per minute and the lack thereof has deprived me of my Amend. V and XIV right to due process and my Amend. I right to freedom of speech.

Clearly the Constitutional questions presented are of importance and the settlement of these questions by this court is plainly in the public interest.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

George Mihalopoulos

ORDER

(May 16, 1974)

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California

Before: KOELSCH, WALLACE and SNEED, Circuit Judges.

We have examined each of appellant's nine assignments of error in light of the record on appeal and we conclude that each of them lacks merit and is without sufficient substance to warrant discussion. Appellant has failed to demonstrate that the judgment was other than the product of a full and fair trial by an unbiased jury; we shall not disturb it on appeal.

AFFIRMED.
